first zombie film; A number of zombie films were produced in the late 1930s and early 1940s. The first zombie film, "White Zombie" (1932), was produced by Victor Halperin. It was a horror film about a doctor who uses voodoo to control his patients. The film was a commercial success and led to a wave of zombie films. The most famous of these is "Night of the Living Dead" (1968), which was produced by George A. Romero. It was a low-budget, independent film that became a cult classic. Other notable zombie films include "Dawn of the Dead" (1978), "Zombieland" (2009), and "The Walking Dead" (2010-2022).
