The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals declined to grant the regulator an emergency stay 🌝 of a ruling that allows the deal to proceed in the US. The United Kingdom's Markets and Competition Authority (CMA) 🌝 is the last remaining regulator of note opposed to the purchase, but the watchdog and Microsoft recently agreed to put 🌝 their legal battle over the deal on hold and negotiate a compromise."From Day One of this acquisition, we ve been committed 🌝 to addressing the concerns of regulators, platform and game developers, and consumers," Microsoft President and Vice Chair Brad Smith tweeted 🌝 in response to Spencer's post. "Even after we cross the finish line for this deal s approval, we will remain focused 🌝 on ensuring that Call of Duty remains available on more platforms and for more consumers than ever before."Spencer did not 🌝 disclose the terms of Microsoft's deal with Sony, though Stephen Totilo of Axios later confirmed that it is 10 years 🌝 in duration. Microsoft first offered Sony a 10-year deal to keep Call of Duty on current and future PlayStation consoles 🌝 at the end of last year, though the Japanese electronics giant turned down the olive branch at the time. In 🌝 an effort to secure approval from regulators, including the FTC and CMA, Microsoft went on to sign an agreement with 🌝 Nintendo to bring the series to the company's future consoles. It also came to terms with cloud gaming providers like 🌝 NVIDIA.Before today, Jim Ryan, the president and CEO of Sony Interactive Entertainment, made clear he was strongly opposed to Microsoft's 🌝 Activision bid. I don t want a new Call of Duty deal. I just want to block your merger, Ryan told 🌝 Activision CEO Bobby Kotick. I told him [Kotick] that I thought the transaction was anti-competitive, I hoped that the regulators 🌝 would do their job and block it, Ryan later said during his testimony at the FTC v. Microsoft hearing. But 🌝 with the purchase all but set to move forward, Sony likely had no choice but to come to terms with 🌝 its
